Norwegian saxophonist Frode Gjerstad recorded this wonderful, spirited meeting with his friend, the late, great John Stevens in 1994 and is finally seeing a release on FMR.

John and I did a few duos over the years and this is the last one we did. It was a warm up for a concert we were going to play with Kent Carter on May 2nd (which was released on Cadence as "Last Detail"), I had just got my ADAT and this was the first recording I made on the machine. Listening back to the tape now, brings back a lot of memories. In between the tracks there is a bit of talking and joking.

As we drove to the airport we talked a bit about future projects and he commented about what we had just done over the last few days, It's good what's done".

In retrospect, those words get another meaning late-on
